

Sonja Ling

Program Coordinator

Global Women - Partners in Philanthropy

Sonja Ling, is the Program Coordinator of Global Women - Partners in Philanthropy (GWPP) and has worked in the Northwest as a policy advocate in renewable energy and is currently a board member of CoolMom, a Seattle-based non-profit that unites moms and families to take local action on climate change. She received her MSc in Environmental Change and Management from the University of Oxford, where she focused her thesis research on solar power in Qinghai, China. She has lived and worked in Taiwan and during the past decade she and her family have spent extended periods of time in both Beijing and Kunming, China. She has a BA from the University of Washington.