

David Day

Chief Executive

Tin Ka Ping Foundation

Born in Shanghai, David began his career as an Administrative Officer at Australian Government's Department of Industry following his tertiary education. His last post there was National Project Coordinator for Apprenticeship before moving to Hong Kong and joining Polytechnic University as a Development Manager in 2004. Working closely with university's senior management and its newly established Development Foundation, David strived in winning hearts and minds of the industrial and commercial sectors to ensure steadily growing support and resource that underpin institution's long-term development endeavour.

David assumed his role as the Head of Partnerships at British Council in 2008, responsible for government and community relations and Council's partnership programs across Mainland China and Hong Kong. In 2012 he accepted the appointment to be the Executive Director at Hong Kong China Chamber of Commerce, helping the Board to set out its 5 year planning, managing membership operations and chamber events, representing over 400 mainland's leading entrepreneurs operating in Hong Kong.

Currently he serves as the Chief Executive for the Tin Ka Ping Foundation with an overall responsibility for its continued educational charity work in the Greater China Region. David has a degree in Business and a Master's in Arts. He enjoys visual arts, and supports youth arts groups and programs in his private capacity and time. Hiking and camping in good weather is also a part of his aspiration to live a life to its fullest.
