

Forum on NGO Board Governance: Leaders' Reflection and Learning

This forum features the insiders' reflection of experiences in building and steering board governance from the perspectives of the leaders in NGO governance and management. In theory, the Board's job is to define the mission, oversee the internal structure and service performance, and ensure that there are adequate resources and help outreach to connect with stakeholders and the community at large, yet in reality, how to resolve differences in the interpretation of the organization mission? How to handle the possible tension between the Board and Management? How to delineate responsibilities between Board and Management in accountability and resources development? What is the pivotal role of the chief executive?
