

Taking China's Anticorruption Campaign Seriously

Abstract

China's ongoing anticorruption campaign has lasted longer and reached higher than ever before. Less obviously, it has also changed the incentive structure for officials so as to reduce both opportunities for corruption and obstacles to anticorruption enforcement. These are all steps toward anticorruption institutionalisation and credible commitment to good governance. China's leaders now face policy choices to promote and protect these achievements.