

Abstract

Engagement and Training of Older Adult Volunteers

From human and social capital perspectives, an ageing population and its social networks can be tremendous resources and assets for communities. Productive engagement in later life (老有所為) has documented significant positive impacts on older adults, families, and society. The challenging question is how to support human capital enhancement among the ageing population. In this presentation, the author will share models and strategies on how to design volunteering programs and educate older people to participate in productive ageing activities.
