

Professor Hong Song-lee
Assistant Professor
Department of Social Work
National University of Singapore

Biography

Hong Song-lee is current Assistant Professor at the Department of Social Work in National University of Singapore where she teaches community work practice, social gerontology and multidisciplinary perspectives on ageing. Her research interests include productive ageing and its impacts on well-being of older adults and their family, well-being of informal caregivers and their coping strategies, health disparity and service utilization of older adults and their caregivers, community-based care for older adults, and environmental gerontology theories and ageing in places.