香港大學社會科學學院
Faculty of Social Sciences • The University of Hong Kong
The University of Hong Kong

Founded in 1911, the University of Hong Kong, as a leading international institution of higher learning in Asia, strives to attract and nurture outstanding postgraduate students from around the world. The University is organized into more than 100 teaching departments and sub-divisions of study, and currently has over 27,000 undergraduate and postgraduate students who come from over 80 countries. Among these, about a third of students come from Mainland China and overseas. The University’s faculty is truly international, with over half coming from overseas or Mainland China. The University seeks to contribute to the advancement of society and the development of leaders through a global presence, scholarly activities with a regional impact and significant engagement with the rest of China.

Faculty of Social Sciences

The Faculty of Social Sciences was established in 1967 and has since then undergone rapid expansion and significant transformation. Through over 45 years of development and growth, the Faculty has become one of the leading schools in social and political science education and research globally. The Faculty takes great pride in its academic and professional excellence, diversity of its faculty and students, and contribution to the well-being of the community and international networking.

Today, the Faculty stands with top social sciences universities in the world. In 2015, we are ranked first in Asia and 29th in the world according to the Times Higher Education World University Rankings. In QS World University Ranking 2015, three of our core disciplines, Geography, Politics and Public Administration, Psychology and Sociology, have been ranked in top 40 subjects in the world respectively.

The Faculty currently comprises 5 core departments and 6 multidisciplinary research centres. All units aim to promote and lead multi-disciplinary and international collaborative research endeavours. The Faculty has achieved recognition in four strategic research areas that it seeks to grow: China Studies, Non-profit Management and Civil Society; Public Policy; and Social and Cognitive Neuroscience.

Facilities of The Faculty of Social Sciences and HKU

Postgraduate Hub (Faculty-based)
The Faculty has set up a postgraduate hub, which spreads over two levels, exclusively for our postgraduate students. With individual workstations for each student and shared common space, supervisors and students from different disciplines can come together to interact in a dynamic learning environment to nurture research excellence.

Postgraduate Housing
Student Housing is provided exclusively for postgraduate students at various locations and is able to accommodate nearly 500 students. Online application is available through the website of CEDARS at http://apps.cedars.hku.hk/pg_housing/

Student Services
HKU fosters a whole-person approach to education. The Centre of Development and Resources for Students (CEDARS) provides guidance and assistance in financial matters, accommodation, disability issues, visas, student activities and any issues of general concern students may have on campus life.

University Health Service
All entitled students may use the University Health Service (UHS). Students with a physical disability affecting mobility, sight or hearing etc. should report to the UHS and CEDARS so that assessment can be made to provide special assistance during their time at the University.

Sports
HKU has two sports centres including two swimming pools operated by the Institute of Human Performance. The Institute also provides a wide range of activities for students at a nominal fee.
Faculty Academic Activities

Overseas Experience for RPg Students
Full-time PhD students are encouraged, with possible funding support, to gain overseas exposure by undertaking research courses or short-term stays at laboratories of partner universities to enhance their research skills.

Annual Research Postgraduate Conference
This multidisciplinary Conference provides a valuable platform for the Faculty’s research postgraduate students and academics to engage in cross-disciplinary and international research interaction.

HKU Postgraduate Summer School: Social Science Research Methods (SSRM)
SSRM is designed to expose postgraduate students and researchers to advanced methodologies for conducting social science research. Covering both qualitative and quantitative techniques, the courses offer students and researchers a unique opportunity to meet leading scholars in their areas, to develop professional networks and to broaden their set of research skills.
