Biography

Dr Lim Kean Fan is Senior Lecturer in Economic Geography, The School of Geography, Politics and Sociology at Newcastle University, United Kingdom.

Dr Lim is primarily interested in how political-economic evolution in East Asia is constituted by proactive state intervention. Over the past decade, he examined how industrial, social welfare and financial experimental policies were implemented in selected cities across China to enhance its Leninist developmental approach. He has published two books, including one in the Royal Geographical Society-Institute of British Geographers' flagship book series, and multiple articles in major journals in human geography, economic sociology, political economy, China studies and East Asian studies.
