

Professor Mark Wang

Director

Centre for Contemporary Chinese Studies

The University of Melbourne

Biography

Professor Mark Wang is Director of Centre for Contemporary Chinese Studies at The University of Melbourne. He is a development geographer. He is also a professor in School of Geography, Earth and Atmospheric Sciences. He was awarded a Bachelor of Science at Shanxi Normal University in 1982. In 1985 he completed a Master of Science in Northeast Institute of Geography & Agro-Ecology, Chinese Academy of Sciences and in 1995 he attained a Doctor of Philosophy from the University of British Columbia.

Professor Wang's recent research projects include Chinese infrastructural investment in Indonesia, poverty alleviation resettlement, land acquisition, and South-to-North water diversion issues in China. He has published extensively on these topics. He received Australian International Medal in 2018.