

Hyunjoon Park

Korea Foundation Professor of Sociology
Director, James Joo-Jin Kim Center for Korean Studies
Department of Sociology
University of Pennsylvania

Hyunjoon Park is Korea Foundation Professor of Sociology and Director of the James Joo-Jin Kim Center for Korean Studies at the University of Pennsylvania. He received his Ph.D. in Sociology from the University of Wisconsin-Madison in 2005. Park is interested in family and social stratification in cross-national comparative perspective, focusing on South Korea and other East Asian societies. In recent years, he has studied changes in marriage, divorce, and living arrangements as well as consequences of demographic and economic trends for education, well-being, and socioeconomic outcomes of children, adolescents, and young adults in Korea. He was the director of the Korean Millennials Research Lab, a multiyear and multidisciplinary project team tasked with investigating the transition to adulthood among young adults in South Korea and Korean Americans in the US. Park has published more than 70 peer-reviewed papers in leading journals including Demography, Social Science & Medicine, Social Forces, Journal of Marriage and Family, Annual Review of Sociology, and Demographic Research, among others. He is the author of the solo-authored book, Re-Evaluating Education in Japan and Korea: De-mystifying Stereotypes (2013 Routledge). He coauthored the book, Diversity and the Transition to Adulthood in America with Phoebe Ho and Grace Kao, published from the University of California Press in 2022. Park published a book on intergenerational social mobility in Korea in Korean. He also coedited two books on Korean families and education, respectively.