

Working Together for Sustainability: Forging Cross Sectoral Partnerships for Collective Impact

Abstract

The goal of sustainability is to build and maintain society's capacity and options for continual, vibrant social and economic development based upon a healthy and renewable natural environment. As problems that hinder sustainable development are often complex, solutions to these problems have to be grounded upon integrated, collaborative efforts by government, business, the academy and civil society, which draw upon knowledge, methods, and perspectives from different sectors. This Forum provides an important occasion that identifies the success factors for effective and impactful partnerships for sustainability.
