Hong Kong Economic and Trade Office - Bridging East and West

To boost Hong Kong’s image as an international hub, the Hong Kong Economic and Trade Office (HKTDC) of the United States, with the support of the Hong Kong Economic and Trade Office to determine whether West Coast corporations might be interested in holding trade fairs or summits in Hong Kong, our team members also monitored developments in the world of Hong Kong and US-China relations. In addition, they organized a HKUSA 10th Anniversary Gala Dinner for more than 400 guests.

Concerted Efforts Resource Centre - Military Summer Camp for Hong Kong Youth

In summer 2007, our team members organized the Military Summer Camp for Hong Kong Youth, which was under the auspices of the Hong Kong, the HKSAR Education Bureau, and the Community Action Resource Centre. The aim was to provide social support for poor and needy children, especially those with educational difficulties.

Mercy Corps and Dandelion School – English Summer Camp in Beijing

The number of migrant children in Beijing is increasing rapidly. At the same time, however, inequality in education is becoming more problematic. The team members therefore organized two programmes to support migrant children in Beijing. One team visited two primary schools and helped improve their educational standards. The other team, which included English language training, spoke to members of the community. The two programmes also included innovative ways to increase children’s motivation to learn English.

Feature Story

Social Innovation through Internships

In 2007, the team worked on the development of social innovation programs. They focused on integrating both social and educational components. On the teaching side, students were encouraged to create social innovation projects in their community. Social innovation projects are the result of a combination of social and educational needs. In this way, students are encouraged to think about social and educational issues in a broader perspective.

A study on students' experiences in social innovation projects showed that students who have participated in social innovation programs are more likely to have a better understanding of social issues and are more likely to have an interest in social and educational development. In this study, students were asked to reflect on their experiences in social innovation programs. They were asked to reflect on their experiences in social innovation programs. They were asked to reflect on their experiences in social innovation programs. They were asked to reflect on their experiences in social innovation programs.